

Record numbers of passengers, safety and security concerns, ticket offices closed and gates left open ...

London Underground needs more staff not fewer numbers rising

4.821 million passengers travelled on the Tube on 4/12/15: a new record

28.76 million passengers travelled on the Tube that week: a record

98.5 million passengers used Oxford Circus station in 2014

revenue lost

The amount of the time that ticket gates are left open at some stations due to lack of staff

£61.47m

£20m

Non-payment of fares has more than trebled from 2010 to 2015.

queueing

Passengers have to queue for up to an hour to buy tickets from machines at busy stations where ticket offices have closed.

safety and security

At Leytonstone station on 5/12/15, a man was stabbed and seriously injured. There were three station staff on duty, who were able to assist and ensure that the situation was not even worse.

Under planned staff cuts from February 2016, there will only be two staff on this station on Saturday evenings - and only one at times.

Sources: Shawcross 13/10/15; BBC; Evening Standard 11/11/15

handsofflondontransport
wordpress.com

London Underground intends to remove around 800 staff from its stations starting in February. Support our campaign to stop these cuts and Staff Our Stations.

www.rmtlondoncalling.org.uk

When record breaking passenger numbers are met with some of the biggest cuts in TfL's history, clearly there's a problem. Valerie Shawcross, Labour, Greater London Assembly